The events this year in Australia's funded class action space demand reflection. The BMW and Westpac High Court decisions have fundamentally changed the funding market.

- Which claims will be commenced closed, which will be commenced open and which won't commence?
- Will the Supreme Court follow the Federal Court in asserting its powers; at least in respect of settlements?
- Does the Federal Court's Practice Note provide sufficient foundation to facilitate access to justice?
- Will there be further legislative intervention?

We also have the Victorian Bill proposing contingency fees for class action lawyers in the Supreme Court of Victoria, supported by a statutory power for the Court to grant common fund orders in favour of the contingency fee lawyers.

- What are the ramifications for Group Members, the Federal Court, Lawyers, Funders, Defendants, conflicts and justice?
- Lawyers will be Funders but only Lawyers are to be granted CFO legislative rights!
- Will other States follow and what is the position of the Federal Government?

Until the High Court decisions, competition was before the Courts rather than in the market and competition motivated open, rather than closed, classes. This reversal of motivation may limit the Federal Court's capacity to control who provides, and at what price, legal and financial services in class actions.

- What are the State and Federal issues to be resolved in the political, legal and economic arenas over the next few years?

And finally, the Federal Parliament is being lobbied to "stop Australia from becoming the litigation hell hole of the South Pacific" in its response to this year's ALRC Report.

These issues and more will be addressed by leaders in their fields, including Justices Murphy and Lee from the Federal Court, applicant and defendant class action lawyers, regulators, funders, economists and academics.

Both ALFA and Shine look forward to your participation at the February Conference promising to provide informative speeches, panel sessions and lively interaction, all in three hours before networking drinks.
